Bork Reveals the Real Deal about the Facts of Life is a witty and humorous description of puberty, adolescence, sex and reproduction.

The main character, Bork, leads fellow pre-teen boys on a journey through everything from physical growth and development to shaving and reproduction. All of the essential, factual information is conveyed in a way that is easy to understand. The amusing and edgy style of this book will appeal to boys ranging from nine to twelve years old. Bork empowers them with easy-to-understand facts, while the interactive element called “Real Deal Action Challenges” promotes understanding through simple and entertaining activities.

The book is ideal for those wishing to be proactive about giving the important coming-of-age talk to their sons. It also serves as a perfect review of the topics presented in the 5th and 6th grade sex education discussions at school.

Instructors of sex education courses taught in upper elementary and middle school will find the book helpful in their teachings and discussions. The book’s lighthearted, interactive approach to much-needed information is a welcomed complement to round out the fact-based, sometimes dry curriculum.

Bork Reveals the Real Deal about the Facts of Life also serves as an effective resource for pediatricians, librarians, and school counselors.

Trenchard is careful to maintain an objective point of view, and avoids the many values and judgments that often accompany these topics. She gives boys what they need to know, when they need to know it — while still harboring them from the many sensitive and complex topics out there in the world. Puberty, adolescence, and reproduction have never been told in a more fun and relaxing way.
